¹ In same codex as GA 763.

² This looks like it may be a different hand than the one that wrote the text beginning on 17a (33). The hand is more compressed, less slanted, different use of ligatures, γ, τ, β. And the text begins again on 17a with Matt 1.1. Some notable differences: κη vs. κυριακη (spelled out); first word—second beta; also, different red ink used. Αβραάμ vs. Αβραάμ; Γ vs. γ in εγεννησε (first one); other accent differences; etc. There are enough similarities, however, to suggest that they are both contemporaneous and done in the same scriptorium. It appears that a second scribe took over for the first one, not satisfied with the quality of work the first did.
